EXPENSE ON INVESTMENT

When an individual who has some money to invest in the future finds his expenses mounting a neck-and-neck race with his income there are two courses open to him. He may increase his income, which is not always possible, or he may cut down his expenses, which is sometimes possible only because it must be done.

It is this cutting down of expenses that demands careful consideration. If they are regarded carelessly, all sorts of wastes are commonly classified as luxuries being really necessities always to be regarded as such. Some things that must first sight be held to be expenses may really be investments. For instance, there is the matter of taking care of one's health. What even money is spent on keeping sickness away, or on reducing the chances of illness in the home, though it may seem to yield no return, is really an investment of the best sort.

In the matter of money spent on education the returns may be even more remote and less tangible. But they come just the same. The cases would be few indeed where an education has not in one way or another yielded high returns on the investment.

And what is true of the individual in this case is equally true of the community. More than the individual is the community likely to regard all but the minimum amount of money spent on education as a questionable expense. We look on it all ways as if it were expensive merely as if it might not indeed be the best sort of investment the community could make.

It is not easy to prove assertions in this field; we are dealing not with weights and measures, pounds, quarts and the like, but with human beings and their reactions. Still, if the words of authorities on these matters mean anything, we find it hard to avoid the conclusion that a more widespread education is the remedy for many of the ills for which we have not yet found a cure.

While it must never be foolishly spent, we must never lose sight of the fact that money devoted to school purposes is a social investment and not an expense.

WE'LL KEEP ON WONDERING

Why is it that women are so neat and men are so sloppy? Herring only that bi-section of the female clan which insists on wearing a bonnet cap to the grocery store, women never appear outside their own doors in one-half of the sloughy, shiftless, good-for-nothing array that a lot of good citizens of the other sex are continually seen in. Why is it?

Perhaps there is no particular virtue in being slicked up all the time, and certainly there is nothing so of fensive to the hearty person of masculine gender as the well-oiled young man whose handkerchief protrudes from his coat sleeve, whose vest buttons look as if they had been massaged and manicured an hour before, and who can wear patent leather shoes six months without getting a lot of nicks in them.

But just take the average pillar of the community. If he wears one of the tortuous and white collars, it will be mangled or else wilted before noon. The soft collars fare little better and the fellow who still dares to wear the good old-fashioned blue shirt, with collar attached, just looks as if he were on the way to the stable, no matter what part of town you meet him in.

This is all said in a spirit of humanity. We realize that one man is at bottom as bad as another, and if one looks a little more perk than his neighbor, it is his wife who really deserves the credit. It is nothing that can be reformed, we suppose, and perhaps the women glory in their superiority, and wouldn't have the menfolk all spick and span even if they could.

But a person can't help wondering sometimes—why is it that a woman looks so neat, and her husband as doggone sloppy?

CO-OPERATION AT WASHINGTON

Bringing the fellows together and getting them acquainted with others' views is the way President Harding to be convened next month may be expected to proceed to the consideration of a program of constructive legislation that will redound to the advantage of all the people.

OBSERVATIONS

Neither a doctor nor a lawyer can afford to have many friends who expect free advice.

The average woman wants her friends to admire her and all the other folks to envy her.

The allies seem to have replaced the watch on the Rhine with an alarm clock.

The average person feels somewhat put out when he learns that he is in wrong.

Not always is it a woman who makes a fool of a man. Nature may see things differently.

One advice to live within one's income seems more impressive when one is an incurable.

It is easy to show interest in the people when you are going after some of his money.

If you want to do a simple act that counts tag away the first thing that appears this year.

A woman may not go to the president's cabinet until she has addressed the ordinary department.

The Turks must be busy somewhere else they seem to be overlooking the reasonable massacre of Armenians.

Letting well enough alone sounds all right, but the professional reformer does not know any such condition.

The latest joy-killer predicts that Japan will cause the world a lot of trouble within a couple of hundred years.

Reagan says 40 years in politics have made him an optimist, but what he probably means is that his optimism has kept him in politics for 40 years.

FRANCE TO HONOR AMERICA'S DEAD

(By Associated Press)
PARIS, March 29.—Plans for Memorial day and commemorative exercises throughout France in honor of America's dead who lie in French soil, have been considered by the American Memorial day committee at a meeting held at the American Legion headquarters.

This general committee unites, under the honorary presidency of Ambassador Hugh C. Wallace, virtually all American activities in France, including the embassy and various consulates.

Following the program adopted last year, the committee will provide for the placing of flowers on a wreath, upon every grave in France, and will organize appropriate exercises at all of the principal military and civil cemeteries where American dead are buried.

Due to the generous contributions made last year, the committee finds that no appeal will be made to the public for the committee for funds for the ceremonies of 1921.

PLANT 300,000 TROUT IN FEATHER RIVER

(By Associated Press)
QUAYVILLE, Cal., March 29.—Approximately 300,000 trout will be placed in Feather county streams this year. Most of the fry will be planted in the Feather river and its tributaries.
